Download for free SUPERAntiSpyware Free Edition Mac OS X 6.0.0.1264 Alternative link to download for free SUPERAntiSpyware Free Edition Mac OS X 6.0.0.1264 The latest, free version of the application designed to detect and remove harmful components (Spyware, Adware, Malware, Trojans, Dialers, Worms, KeyLoggers, Hijackers) installed on the system. The program offers three scanning modes to check hard disk, removable media, memory and registry. The free SUPERAntiSpyware version has a constantly updated signature database, but you should download it manually. In addition, the application allows you to specify secure files or folders for faster scanning of the entire system. Press and hold shift + command + 3 for a quick screenshot. Use shift + command + 4 or shift + command + 4 + spacebar to capture a portion of the screen or an entire window. Launch the screenshot app by use shift + command + 5 key combo and choose the type of screenshot you'd like to capture. This article covers how to take screenshots on a Mac with key combinations and the screenshot app built into macOS, which was introduced with macOS Mojave (10.14). The screenshots below are from macOS Catalina (10.15), but you can use the same commands in earlier versions of macOS and Mac OS X. There are several key combinations that you can use to take screenshots on Mac, with shift + command + 3 being the most commonly used. This key combination immediately snaps a screenshot of your entire screen, including all visible windows, the desktop, the dock, and any other visible elements. Open the window you want to screenshot, or otherwise arrange the screen to your liking. Press and hold shift + command + 3. You will hear a snapshot sound, and a small image of your screenshot will appear in the bottom right corner of the screen. If you click the thumbnail in the bottom right corner of the screen, you can open a preview of the screenshot. When you click the small image, it will open as a quick preview. If you only want to capture part of the screen, the most flexible option is to use the shift + command + 4 key combination. Using this combination changes your mouse cursor into crosshairs, allowing you to select any portion of the screen to capture. Press and hold shift + command + 4. When the mouse cursor changes into a crosshair, place the crosshair at the upper left corner of the area you want to capture. Click your mouse, and drag a box to cover the area you want to capture. When you release the mouse button, your Mac will capture a screenshot of the highlighted area. If you want to screenshot a single window, then you can use a variation on the previous key combination. This option changes your cursor into a camera icon and lets you snap a shot of any active window. Open the window you need a screenshot of, then press and hold shift + command + 4 + spacebar. Your cursor will turn into a camera. Move the camera icon over the window you want to capture, and click. Your Mac will take a screenshot of the window you clicked, and a preview will appear in the bottom right corner of the screen. Your Mac also has a screenshot app that provides some more advanced options as long as you have upgraded the operating system to Mojave (10.14) or newer. This compact app gives you action to the same basic capture options you can achieve with key combinations, but it also allows you to delay your screenshot and provides some other options. Press and hold shift + command + 5 to open the screenshot app. To screenshot the entire screen, click the left screenshot icon that looks like a box with a line at the bottom, then click anywhere on the screen. To screenshot a window, click the middle screenshot icon that looks like a window, then click the window you want to capture. To capture a specific area of your screen, click the right screenshot icon, click and drag the highlighted area, then click capture to screenshot the specified area. You can also click Options to access a variety of settings. Within the options menu you can: Choose the location where your screenshots are saved. Set a delay timer for your screenshots. Choose a microphone for video recordings. Set advanced options. By default, your screenshots are saved directly to your desktop. If you don't see them there, then you or someone else changed the location where screenshots are saved at some point in the past. If you can't find your screenshots, try this: Press shift + command + 5 to open the screenshot app, then click Options. In the Save to section, note the option that has a check mark next to it. That is where you will find your screenshots. Use Spotlight to search for "screen shot" if you suspect that you may have screen shots stored in a variety of locations. This search will turn up every screen shot that's stored on your computer. Thanks for letting us know! Tell us why!
